Opening in May 2013, The Box at the Fox Entertainment Plaza (The Box) is a community theater that doubles as a state-of-the-art flexible facility that seats approximately 200 patrons. The Box is a unique space for small, intimate experiences for dance, musical, theatrical, multimedia, and educational productions. It is ideal for rehearsals, classes, receptions, and meetings for nonprofit based or commercial organizations.

The Box is mostly used by local nonprofit performing arts organizations. Shows have ranged from one-day move-in/move-outs to multi-week performances. Most often performances take place on Friday and Saturday evenings with matinee shows on Sunday. Events vary from theatrical, dance performances and recitals, to comedy shows. The facility is also used for meetings, small conferences, and classes. During the summer season, the space is used by organizations holding summer camps for children.

Ticket sales are managed by the organizers of events and revenue goes directly to the organizer. The new website for the theater was launched mid-summer and staff is working with organizers to begin to build a cohesive marketing plan for events held at The Box. The website serves as a centralized platform providing general information for the facility and will be hosting event information for upcoming performances.

The Box serves as a community theater with a focus on nonprofit local serving organizations. There are maintenance costs associated with maintaining the facility open and available to these community groups.
