

As stated, the city does not currently have a short-term rental ordinance, but regulates the operation of these homes and the negative effects they may have through the application of various existing nuisance laws. The draft ordinance (Attachment 1) consolidates some of these nuisance laws under one ordinance and provides the ability to adequately regulate STR's to mitigate many of the negative impacts they may have in their surrounding neighborhoods, while at the same time, providing opportunity to operate an STR in a profitable and responsible manner. Adoption and application of this ordinance may impact staffing and workload levels as there are currently approximately 200 licensed Short-Term Rentals in the City, and more than likely, additional unlicensed homes that this ordinance will apply to.

Authority to Regulate Occupancy Limits

For single family housing units, whether tenant or owner occupied, municipalities cannot impose stricter occupancy limits than those allowed for by the Uniform Housing Code (UHC) The UHC Section 503.2 specifies that each sleeping room can accommodate two people per 70 sq. ft. and each additional 50 sq. ft. would allow for an additional person. For example, a 120 sq. ft. room (10' X 12') could accommodate three people – two for the first 70 sq. ft. and one additional for the extra 50 sq. ft.

However, since short-term rentals are considered a transient use and not a traditional residential use since residency is for 30 days or less, they can be regulated as a business activity like a hotel/motel through the city's police powers as authorized by the California Constitution and the California Government Code. (Const. Art 11, section 7; Govt Code 65850.)

Municipalities have the authority to prohibit or regulate short-term rentals and enact laws that can limit the number of guests, (such as two per bedroom,) and require fire and safety inspections before issuing a permit, etc.
